

i looked out over this incredible environment there were round wooden buildings perched high up on the edges of the cliffs beautiful green trees clung to the rocks and the surface of a glorious lake shimmered far beneath me i turned and walked along the wooden path

as i approached a small greenhouse i heard music playing i clambered down the steps to see where it was coming from it was yeesha

cant talk right now she said im trying to remember the song i heard on serenia but its really hard she sat down ive got to get it perfect she continued because i promised to play it to my brother next time i see him

i carefully climbed up the steps again and headed to another building i couldnt believe that i was standing in such a stunning location a bird perched on the feeder next to me hello little i said to it but it flew off before i could finish my sentence

after a few minutes i entered another room it had unusual machines and objects inside it only atrus and his family could possess strange creations like these curiously i headed out and down another path i could hear the sound of water falling this must be the water wheel i thought to myself i pressed a round bronze button and whoosh all of a sudden thousands of gallons of water started pouring out from up above me and the wheel began turning spinning faster and faster the noise from this enormous machine was immense now that the power was on i turned around and walked towards the observatory there was a loud rumbling and the walkway beneath me started rumbling and shaking violently before i could find anything to hold on to the bridge collapsed and i was knocked unconscious when i opened my eyes everything was dark i clung to the broken path and tried not to look down i was hanging one hundred feet above the lake one false move and i would plummet into the cold waters below

i looked out over this incredible environment there were round wooden buildings perched high up on the edges of the cliffs beautiful green trees clung to the rocks and the surface of a glorious lake shimmered far beneath me i turned and walked along the wooden path

as i approached a small greenhouse i heard music playing i clambered down the steps to see where it was coming from it was yeesha

cant talk right now she said im trying to remember the song i heard on serenia but its really hard she sat down ive got to get it perfect she continued because i promised to play it to my brother next time i see him

i carefully climbed up the steps again and headed to another building i couldnt believe that i was standing in such a stunning location a bird perched on the feeder next to me hello little i said to it but it flew off before i could finish my sentence